Oppenheimer's tent city cleared

DTES. Many of the camp's former residents remain without a home

A man is arrested at Oppenheimer Park on Thursday afternoon. City workers and fire officials spent the day helping people pack up their belongings and cleaning up the camp. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

An overnight reprieve didn't stop Vancouver's homeless camp from being dismantled by authorities on Thursday.

Several people were arrested by police Thursday afternoon after the majority of campers in the Downtown Eastside's Oppenheimer Park had reluctantly packed up their belongings and left.

Volunteers, city staff and fire officials dismantled tents and cleaned up the park under the watchful eye of a large police presence, in accordance with a court-ordered injunction.

Despite a 10 p.m. deadline Wednesday to take down structures at the tent city, police decided not to enforce the injunction in the middle of the night.

That seemed to have a calming effect on efforts to break up the camp — which has been home to more than 200 people since July — the following morning.

"It has been quite peaceful," said Pivot Legal Society lawyer DJ Larkin, who had a team of legal observers at the park. "The police are standing by; it's mostly fire rescue that have been interacting with people. From what I've seen, they've been doing so respectfully."

Authorities were pleased with the progress being made until about a dozen tents remained.

Police moved in at about 4:30 p.m. and arrested five people who refused to take down their tent.

A line of officers blocked off the police wagon and faced protesters who were singing and drumming while the campers were taken into custody and driven off.

The city says 56 campers have been transitioned into permanent housing, and another 62 have been placed into temporary shelters as of Wednesday night.

But resentment over the city's efforts to disperse the homeless still lingers.

"They shouldn't have done it to begin with," said Dan Wallace, one of the camp's leading advocates. "Some campers are willing to take the facilities offered, but it doesn't work for everyone. There are a few couples here; they're not going to separate (to get into gender-specific shelters). The city is making the homeless homeless again. The logic is stupid."

Jeffrey Dean Caldwell, a homeless man who has camped at the park since July, said he was willing to stay at Oppenheimer and risk arrest.

"I have nothing to lose," he said. "The last couple of days have been frightening in the camp. (The city) wants us to go, but go where? People are just scattering to alleyways, doorways and parking garages."

Larkin said Pivot has been urging campers to comply with the court injunction.

"There are a few people who have said they'd like to stay and made a stand. Our advice to them has been to not breach the court order," she said. "Many people are resigned to it."

The city has argued that conditions in the camp have steadily deteriorated and that it is unsafe, with Mayor Gregor Robertson pointing to the death of a 69-year-old man there as evidence. MATT KIELTYKA/METRO

Man charged with sexual assault of 9-year-old girl

Surrey. Girl was allegedly abducted from her bedroom and taken to a nearby park

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

A second man has been arrested in the horrific incident where a nine-year-old Surrey girl was allegedly abducted from her bedroom and sexually assaulted in a nearby park late this summer.

The girl was allegedly lured out of the window in the room where she had been sleeping in the 9900 block of 128 Street on Aug. 28 shortly before 11 p.m. Her attacker left her in a neighbour's yard before she fled back home, where her mother called police. She was taken to hospital.

Chilliwack resident Cory Schaumleffel, 28, was arrested Monday and charged with kidnapping, sexual assault, sexual interference, committing an indecent act and breaking and entering with intent, according to a statement from Surrey RCMP.

It's a drastic twist in the shocking case, as police had already obtained a confession from Surrey resident Donovan Adams, who was arrested on Sept. 2.

But police put the case against Adams on hold last week (with support from the Crown) after the investigation revealed the comments he made implicating himself did not match the evidence.

This resulted from a continued search for new evidence and an independent analysis of his statement. Such an analysis is standard practice, but police say it was especially important in this case due to Adams' "vulnerability."

"As more evidence was unearthed, it became apparent that Mr. Adams had confessed to a crime he did not commit," Supt. Trent Rolfe said in a statement.

When forensic evidence indicated Schaumleffel could be involved in the incident, Surrey RCMP began to investigate him.

Schaumleffel has been in custody or under house arrest since Sept. 13 for an unrelated matter.

He remains in custody.

What's your municipal representative's platform on cycling?

A man bikes down the Union Street bike route in Vancouver on Thursday. Everyone has an opinion about bike lanes. In advance of the Nov. 15 election, local non-profit HUB Cycling is asking the more than 400 candidates for mayor, council and park board in 16 Lower Mainland municipalities what they think about cycling. Each candidate will be given until Oct. 24 to fill out a survey with two questions, one about their specific municipality and one about cycling infrastructure that connects the entire region, HUB spokesman Colin Stein said. Their responses will be posted online for the public to check out. "Every candidate for public office should have some sort of transportation platform, and that does include all modes of travel," Stein said. "Cycling matters — whether you cycle or not, kids bike around the neighbourhood, people bike to school, people ride to work." EMILY JACKSON/METRO

Earthquake drill sets new Canadian record

Drop, cover and hold on. 730,000 prepare for the Big One

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Members of Vancouver's Heavy Urban Search and Rescue team practise — using a dummy — the procedure for extracting a person trapped under heavy items in an earthquake during a drill on Thursday. EMILY JACKSON/METRO

The victim was trapped beneath broken concrete pipes, unable to extract himself from the wreckage.

But the Vancouver Heavy Urban Search and Rescue team — along with their highly trained dogs — used a camera to locate his whereabouts, donned hard hats, climbed through the pipes and used a crane to lift the man onto a stretcher and to safety.

Sure, the earth wasn't actually shaking and the dummy lost a leg, but this was just a test.

Vancouver Fire and Rescue Services practiced this scenario in an elaborate drill at Vanier Park on Thursday, where about 60 first responders and 20 volunteers from the city's Neighbourhood Emergency Assistance Teams tested the equipment and skills needed in an actual earthquake.

Fireboats pumped water from False Creek to use in case the city's pipes burst, a desalination system converted salt water into drinking water and the canine squad tested their mettle.

The drill coincided with the annual Great British Columbian ShakeOut, where thousands of British Columbians practice how to drop, cover and hold on in case of an earthquake.

With 730,000 participants, the drill broke records and became the largest earthquake drill in Canadian history.

The annual practice is to prepare citizens — especially those in extremely high-risk zones in the Lower Mainland and on the west coast of Vancouver Island and Haida Gwaii — for when the "Big One" hits. (The last massive quake was in 1700, leaving B.C. expecting another at any moment — in the next couple of hundred years.)

The drill held by the province aims to raise awareness about what to do during and after a quake and how to prepare for it in advance, such as buying an earthquake kit.

But some don't believe the province is doing enough to keep people, especially schoolchildren, safe in case of an earthquake.

The B.C. NDP blasted Premier Christy Clark for failing to seismically upgrade 10 schools last year, a promise she made in her 2013 re-election campaign.

But the B.C. Liberals say those schools are under construction, and another seven are moving toward construction.

Regardless, there are still 126 high-risk schools in B.C., dozens of which are in the Lower Mainland.

It will cost an estimated $600 million to fix the remaining schools, according to a statement from the Ministry of Education.

Robertson case thrown out

Vancouver Mayor Gregor Robertson's nomination papers are in order, a judge ruled Thursday in a decision to dismiss a challenge alleging the papers contained mistruths.

Cedar Party council candidate Glen Chernen filed a legal challenge seeking to disqualify the mayor from running, alleging Robertson didn't put his actual address on the nomination papers.

Robertson used his house in Kitsilano that he owns with his wife Amy, although he has been living in a downtown condo since the pair separated this spring.

"Judge Rae dismissed Chernen's application, confirmed the mayor's status as a candidate and awarded costs against Chernen," Robertson's lawyer David Gruber said in an emailed statement.

"She said she was satisfied there was nothing false or misleading in the mayor's nomination form."

An affidavit from the mayor's wife Amy states Robertson still has keys to the house, comes over for meals sometimes, keeps personal items in the house and pays bills and property taxes.

Fiery relationship led to B.C. prof's death, court hears

Melanie O'Neill. Death of popular teacher the end result of a series of problems with Matthew Scott, who was in court for a sentencing hearing

The death of a popular chemistry professor from a Vancouver-area university was the culmination of a tumultuous relationship plagued by alcohol abuse, arguments and numerous encounters with the police, a judge heard Thursday.

Melanie O'Neill, 37, was found dead in her townhouse in Vancouver in July 2011, and her on-again, off-again boyfriend, Matthew Scott, has since pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Scott, now 28, was in court for a sentencing hearing.

O'Neill died from asphyxiation, possibly from being choked during a drunken argument, the court heard, but Scott has maintained he never intended to hurt or kill her. The Crown called for seven to nine years in prison, while the defence asked for five to six.

On July 22, 2011, the court heard, O'Neill sent Scott a series of text messages repeating many of her concerns about their relationship. She then contacted her cellphone provider to change her number.

That night, neighbours again heard arguing, followed by "running, chasing and thumping," Crown counsel Elliot Poll told the court.

"The Crown submits that's when Mr. Scott caused Prof. O'Neill's death," said Poll.

Scott spent the next several days selling O'Neill's belongings at pawn shops, drinking, watching pornography and searching the Internet for suicide methods. He wrapped O'Neill's body in plastic and hid it inside a closet, the court heard, and he eventually used O'Neill's credit card to book a flight to Edmonton.

The judge in the case will rule on Scott's sentence at a later date. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kamloops. Man, offered sentencing circle, back in jail facing 15 charges

The first person to be offered a native sentencing circle in Kamloops, B.C., two years ago is back behind bars after racking up 15 charges.

Douglas Jensen is facing several charges — including breaking and entering, unauthorized possession of a firearm, obstructing a peace officer and possession of stolen property — dating back to July 10.

Jensen, 37, was released from jail in June after serving a 45-day sentence for breaching his probation.

In September 2012, Jensen was the first recipient of a sentencing circle offered by the Tk'emlups Indian Band, in conjunction with the Crown and B.C. Supreme Court.

That was after he drove a stolen pickup truck into a house on the reserve before leading police on a high-speed chase and driving at a constable.

Jensen was in custody for more than 18 months after the incident on Feb. 14, 2011.

He was granted bail prior to the sentencing circle and placed on a 22-month probation term. He was also ordered to enter into a four-year contract with the band and to abstain from drugs and alcohol.

In May, a Kamloops provincial court judge scolded Jensen for "taking advantage" of the sentencing circle in 2012.

Court has heard Jensen was the victim of sexual assault when he was a child.

He and his co-accused, Francis August, are slated to return to court next March for a five-day trial. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Appeal

Pedophile gets 55 days shaved off prison sentence

A convicted B.C. pedophile who sexually assaulted his partner's two-year-old daughter and recorded the crimes on video will serve 55 fewer days in prison.

The man, who is identified in court documents only as K.D.C., pleaded guilty to the offences and was sentenced to 12 years in prison — reduced to 11 years because of time served. But he appealed, arguing before the province's highest court that the sentencing judge didn't consider rehabilitation or mitigating factors.

B.C. Court of Appeal Justice David Tysoe has allowed his appeal on the length of sentence. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kelowna

No charges for Mounties who injured pedestrian during pursuit

B.C.'s Criminal Justice Branch says no charges will be laid against three Mounties who were involved in a police pursuit in Kelowna, where a pedestrian was seriously hurt.

The chase happened last December after a driver allegedly sped from a police check stop for impaired drivers and ended when the vehicle being pursued swerved in front of a police cruiser and struck a man on the grass at 60 kilometres an hour.

The branch says the chase was called off, but an investigation found that not all officers heard the radio command and that more Mounties joined the pursuit. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Crime still plagues Surrey streets despite police blitz

Metro votes. Each week leading up to the Nov. 15 elections, Metro explores the top issues facing the region. The second in our series: crime in Surrey

thandi.fletcher@metronews.ca

Julie Vitick was managing her regular shift at Brewster's Liquor Store in Surrey late last year when, unknown to her, a violent assault was unfolding only a block away.

It was Dec. 29, and 53-year-old Julie Paskall, a mother of three, was brutally beaten in the parking lot of a community ice arena. She died in hospital two days later.

"It kind of shook the town a little bit," Vitick told Metro. "You just don't expect that to happen in a pretty populated area."

Paskall's death was the last in a year that saw Surrey set a grim record of 25 homicides, compared to 11 the previous year.

Ten months later, Vitick said the memory of the violent homicide still haunts her neighbourhood.

A recent Insights West survey that polled 495 Surrey residents found that 51 per cent identified crime as the most important issue facing their city.

Half of those surveyed believe the level of criminal activity in Surrey has increased in the past five years, while 53 per cent said they fear becoming a victim of crime "a great deal" or "a fair amount."

Meanwhile, 48 per cent of Surrey residents said they would feel "unsafe" if they were walking alone in their own neighbourhood after dark.

The numbers are a far cry from Vancouver, where 55 per cent of respondents think criminal activity has stayed the same, only a third fear becoming victims and just 22 per cent said they feel unsafe walking alone after dark.

For Vitick, the numbers ring true. Although she has lived in Surrey her entire life, she said she never goes out by herself at night.

"I'm careful," she said. "I don't go places alone for the most part."

After Paskall's death, Vitick said she has noticed a significant increase in visible policing — a positive sign, she said, for a city with a crime rate that far exceeds the national crime-severity index.

"Right after that happened, the RCMP now walk around town instead of driving," she said. "They're checking on us regularly. Before, it was just non-existent."

However, Vitick said petty crime continues to plague the neighbourhood surrounding her workplace.

Julie Vitick, manager of Brewster's Liquor Store in Surrey, said she has noticed an increase in visible policing following Julie Paskall's death. Paskall was brutally beaten on Dec. 29, 2013, outside Newton Arena, just one block away from Vitick's workplace. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

The majority of incidents are thefts or attempted thefts, she said, pointing to a recent break-in a couple of weeks ago at Brewster's Liquor Store.

Surrey RCMP Cpl. Bert Paquet confirmed that police have beefed up their presence in Newton following Paskall's death, recognizing that visible policing is the "first level of response and intervention."

"The tragic homicide of Julie Paskall has changed the ways we do things," said Paquet. "We have stepped up and are glad that residents and merchants alike have noticed the positive impact this has made."

Earlier this week, Surrey RCMP Chief Supt. Bill Fordy requested an additional 47 members for the detachment following the results of two independent research projects.

When she heads to the ballot box next month, Vitick said crime will be top of mind.

And while she supports the increase in RCMP presence, she said she thinks increased community involvement, such as neighbourhood block watch groups, would have a stronger impact.

"I feel we need to have more communal meetings," she said. "There are already a lot of RCMP members."

Candidates plan their counterattack

When municipal elections get underway next month, Surrey will be home to one of the most hotly contested mayoral races in B.C., with crime dominating the platforms of each candidate.

For the first time in nearly a decade, Mayor Dianne Watts will not be on the ballot. Five candidates are looking to replace her, including the "big three": ex-mayor Doug McCallum and councillors Barinder Rasode and Linda Hepner.

Although crime has long been an issue for Surrey, Rasode, a two-term councillor and chair of the Community Safety Committee, said the recent homicide of Serena Vermeersch, 17, as she was walking home last month, as well as the death of Julie Paskall late last year, have brought the issue to the forefront this election.

Rasode split from Watts' Surrey First Party earlier this year partly because of how the mayor handled Paskall's death.

"We knew that the Newton Rec Centre was not safe and we didn't take the appropriate steps," she said. "There was an attack two days prior to that, and why weren't people notified?"

Rasode said she has a comprehensive plan, which retiring Delta Police Chief Jim Cessford helped draft. It would include an office of public safety and 200 unarmed community officers.

"We are asking that as a community we know where these high-risk offenders are."

Surrey First candidate Linda Hepner

For former three-term mayor McCallum, his decision to return to politics as mayoral candidate for the Safe Surrey Coalition was a direct result of Surrey's crime problem.

"We've had our house broken into, our car has been stolen," he said. "We have to make our communities feel safer now."

Quoted

"Together as a group, we'll be able to drive crime out of our communities."

Former mayor Doug McCallum

McCallum said he would increase spending on social development to address mental illness and addiction issues. He said he would also increase the number of RCMP officers and encourage residents to volunteer for initiatives like community foot patrol.

"Together as a group, we'll be able to drive crime out of our communities," he said.

Quoted

"There was an attack two days prior to that, and why weren't people notified?"

Coun. Barinder Rasode

Surrey First candidate Linda Hepner, a three-term councillor, said she wants the federal government to make the locations of high-risk offenders publicly available.

"We're not asking for their address, but we are asking that as a community we know where these high-risk offenders are," she said.

Although Surrey's crime rate has dropped by 11 per cent between 2009 and 2013, Hepner said public safety is still a significant concern.

"We've had such horrific crimes this year that touched the very soul of everyone," she said.

As for petty crime, Hepner said she believes a neighbourhood policing model, similar to what McCallum has proposed, could help. THANDI FLETCHER/METRO

Data. Majority of Chinese, South Asian B.C. residents experience racism: Poll

The majority of British Columbia residents of Chinese and South Asian descent have experienced racism, according to a new poll.

Insights West surveyed 658 residents from the two ethnic groups, with 81 per cent of respondents reporting they've faced some sort of discrimination as a result of their ethnicity.

Fifty-six per cent said they have experienced "a small amount" of discrimination, 19 per cent have encountered "moderate" discrimination while six per cent classified the discrimination they faced as "significant."

Only 16 per cent of respondents said they have never experienced discrimination because of their ethnicity.

Convicted fraudster scams woman: Cops

Police in Victoria are looking for a convicted fraudster who allegedly scammed a woman out of thousands of dollars. According to police, Dallon Kyle Johnstone met the woman through an online dating website in July and began a short relationship with her.

Within days, Johnstone had bilked her out of thousands of dollars, police allege.

Officers investigating Johnstone found he has a history of convictions for fraud-related offences, according to police.

Police said Johnstone has evaded all attempts to locate him, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest. Anyone who has information about his whereabouts is asked to call police or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

Green groups lose bid over natural gas fracking

Court. Judge dismisses the petition tabled by environmental organizations

A judge will not stop the flow of fresh water from British Columbia's lakes and rivers to hydraulic fracking operations, but did recognize the issue as a growing public concern.

The Western Canada Wilderness Committee and the Sierra Club filed a petition against the B.C. Oil and Gas Commission and energy company Encana Corp. over the commission's decision to grant repeat short-term water approvals to the company.

The environmental groups wanted the court to declare the approvals a violation of the provincial Water Act. They also asked a judge to quash several such permits issued to Encana.

But in a decision posted this week on the court website, B.C. Supreme Court Justice Shelley Fitzpatrick dismissed the application.

"Over the last few decades, the world has become increasingly aware that water is a precious resource," she wrote.

"This heightened awareness has caused many persons, including public interest groups such as the petitioners, to question the management of our water resources, particularly as it relates to the use of publicly owned water by industry."

Concerns include increasing pressure on water resources and the effect of chemicals used in the fracking process, as well as the effect of fracking on underground water resources, Fitzpatrick noted.

Disgruntled boat buyer's emails cost him $40K

Robert Turpin. After discovering a yacht he bought had defective windows, purchaser made false allegations about the boat dealer

A judge has ordered a British Columbia man to pay $40,000 in damages for sending emails making false allegations against a Seattle boat dealer.

The emails were sent during a dispute over defective windows on the man's yacht.

Ray Prokorym, sales manager at a boat dealership, filed a lawsuit in B.C. Supreme Court against Robert Turpin following a series of emails sent in April 2012.

Court heard that in December 2011, Prokorym sold Turpin a used 19.5-metre boat for $1.16 million.

After Turpin, of 100 Mile House, B.C., took possession of the vessel, he realized some of the windows were defective.

In April 2012, Prokorym offered to split the cost of the windows — an $11,000 fix — in "good faith."

Turpin did not accept the offer and instead sent an email to dealership employees, falsely describing Prokorym as a convicted sex offender.

Turpin also threatened to hang a banner from his boat calling Prokorym a liar.

He eventually sent the email to 23 addresses associated with yacht sales. He never followed through on his threat to send it to Puget Sound schools and churches and no banner was ever hung from his yacht.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Ian Meiklem said the emails established publication of the defamatory claims.

In a sworn affidavit, Turpin said he was in "a tailspin, psychologically speaking, of drug and alcohol abuse" when he sent the emails.

He said he was forced to sell the yacht at a loss of $200,000 because he couldn't afford to replace the 17 defective windows.

Meiklem ordered Turpin to pay $30,000 in general damages, $10,000 in punitive damages and $615 in costs.

Prokorym also filed a criminal complaint with the RCMP. That investigation is ongoing.

Sexually transmitted infections. Group attempts to test most people in 24 hours

MIKE DONACHIE
Metro in London, Ont.

Middlesex-London Health Unit worker Brittany Van Horik collects urine samples Thursday at Fansahwe College. MIKE DONACHIE/METRO

The student union at London, Ont.'s Fanshawe College was handing out cups Thursday, but they didn't contain coffee.

The area sees five cases of chlamydia a day, according to the Middlesex-London Health Unit, and so health workers are raising awareness by attempting to set a Guinness world record for the most tests for sexually transmitted infections in 24 hours.

The health unit will make two attempts, the first began Thursday at Fanshawe and the second will take place at nearby Western University on Tuesday. The record of 767 tests was set in Basingstoke, England, on Valentine's Day in 2013.

Students at the University of Calgary attempted to break the record in April but were unsuccessful, recording 501 tests.

Students take a sample cup into the washroom and bring it back with urine. The sample will be tested for chlamydia and gonorrhea, and anyone with a positive result will be contacted.

"Chlamydia and gonorrhea (positive results) are higher than the provincial average in Middlesex-London," said health promoter Chris Blain.

Among those being tested were nursing students Michael Cunha and Burcu Iltan.

"It's better to raise awareness," Iltan said. "As nursing students, that's ideally what we should be doing."

Cunha chipped in: "We should be an example and help alleviate the stigma."

Rob Ford's file privacy breached: Mount Sinai

The Toronto hospital treating Rob Ford for cancer says two of its staffers "inappropriately" viewed the mayor's health record.

A Mount Sinai Hospital spokeswoman said in a short statement Thursday the two weren't part of Ford's medical team and that an investigation was immediately launched.

Sally Szuster says that "appropriate action" against the employees has been taken, but refused in a brief interview to say just what has been done, citing "privacy reasons."

The hospital's statement says it learned about the disclosure "through a robust system of safeguards and auditing procedures designed to ensure compliance to our security and privacy policies."

"We sincerely regret that these privacy breaches occurred. Privacy for all of our patients is paramount and we will continue to be diligent in upholding our privacy policies and practices," the statement said.

Treatment

The mayor underwent an initial round of chemotherapy last month after being diagnosed with a rare and aggressive form of cancer, and returned for another round last week.

The cancer diagnosis prompted the mayor to end his re-election bid, and he is now running for a council seat instead. His brother, Doug, is running for mayor in his place.

A weary-looking Rob Ford cast his ballot in advance polling for the municipal election Tuesday, and said he was to return to the hospital on Oct. 29 — two days after the municipal vote. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'How do you cyber-mob?'

'GamerGate.' Angry video game players are harassing female gamers; no one has been held responsible

LUKE SIMCOE
Metro Online

Under the banner of "GamerGate," angry video game players are harassing and threatening prominent women in the game community — and few if any, are facing any consequences.

GamerGate began in August, when a diatribe about game developer Zoe Quinn surfaced online, written by an ex-boyfriend and alleging she slept with a journalist to ensure a positive review for her game Depression Quest. Angry users pounced, spreading the allegations and sending Quinn threatening tweets and phone calls.

GamerGate supporters argue it has sparked a discussion about bias in video game journalism, while critics believe the movement is merely a front for misogynistic attacks.

"They say they're about ethics in journalism, but the only thing they've produced in two months is harassment against marginalized people," said Veerender Jubbal, an aspiring video game critic based in Brampton, Ont., and the creator of the #StopGamerGate2014 hashtag on Twitter.

Last week, game developer Brianna Wu fled her Boston home after her address was posted on the Internet alongside rape and death threats. The Twitter user responsible called Wu a "feminist asshat" and was upset she had mocked GamerGate.

On Tuesday, feminist media critic Anita Sarkeesian cancelled a lecture at Utah State University after the school received a threatening email. Sarkeesian, who hails from Toronto, was scheduled to speak about the portrayal of women in video games.

"I will write my manifesto in (Sarkeesian's) spilled blood, and you will all bear witness to what feminist lies and poison have done to the men of America," the letter said.

Despite the fact that many of the activities carried out under the GamerGate banner are illegal — such as harassment, slander and uttering threats or hate speech — no one has been held responsible go after the scholar asks or charged.

"We actually don't have legislation that's caught up with the nature of these threats," said York University professor Jennifer Jenson. "Right now, we have no real recourse."

For Jenson, the problem is less about the law, per se, than enforcing it. In particular, she believes police need to be better educated about how the law applies to online activity.

"A lot of people, when they go to report cyber-harassment to the police, they feel like they're talking to a brick wall," she said.

Danielle Citron, a legal scholar at the University of Maryland, agrees.

Citron's recent book, Hate Crimes in Cyberspace, features interviews with Anita Sarkeesian and describes how initially, she was reluctant to approach police.

"There were hundreds and hundreds of posts. It was daunting," Citron said. "How do you go after the cyber-mob?"

The FBI is investigating some of the threats made against Sarkeesian — particularly a bomb threat that was sent to the Game Developers Choice Awards in San Francisco last March — and Citron is hopeful that some of the worst offenders may actually end up before a court.

"There's never going to be perfect enforcement," she said. "But we need to send a message to everyone else that there may be consequences to their behaviour."

Diversity in gaming

Jennifer Allaway is a U.S. researcher who studies diversity in the game industry. She has interviewed numerous gamers and developers and says GamerGate is in no way reflective of the broader video game community. According to Allaway's findings:

1. 78 per cent of women and 71 per cent of men support attempts to hire more women in the game industry.
2. 87 per cent of women and 70 per cent of men want to see more female protagonists in video games.
3. 83 per cent of women and 73 per cent of men believe diverse development teams create better-quality games.

Apple unveils faster iPad Air 2, Apple Pay system

Apple unveiled a thinner iPad Thursday with a faster processor and a better camera as it tries to drive excitement for tablets amid slowing demand.

The iPad Air 2 also adds many of the features previously available on iPhones, and includes a fingerprint ID sensor for use instead of a passcode.

Meanwhile, Apple made its new Mac operating system, Yosemite, available as a free download starting Thursday.

Apple Pay, the company's new system for using iPhones to make credit and debit card payments at retail stores, will launch on Monday.

New iPads

Apple's new tablet is 18 per cent and 6.1 millimetres thinner than the previous version.

The rear camera is boosted to 8 megapixels, matching what's found in iPhones.

Mac Updates

The company unveiled new iMacs with a sharper display. Apple also released its new Yosemite operating system for Macs as a free download. The Mac update include new functionality, such as the ability to make phone calls with an iPhone nearby and a one-stop search tool for both locally stored documents and online resources.

Apple Pay

Deals have been made with hundreds of additional credit card issuers since the new payment service was announced last month.

With Apple Pay, iPhone 6 and 6 Plus owners will be able to make payments at brick-and-mortar stores by holding their phone near a card reader. The new iPhones have a wireless chip to transmit the information needed to complete the transaction.

Canadian woman tried to enter U.S. by kayak: Officials

A Canadian woman is in custody after American federal authorities say she tried to enter the U.S. illegally by kayaking across the Niagara River near Buffalo.

The Buffalo News reports that U.S. Border Patrol agents were alerted by Canadian police that a woman was kayaking across the river from Ontario toward Beaver Island State Park on Grand Island, New York, just north of Buffalo.

Officials say 32-year-old Olivia Leigh Suriani was apprehended as she approached a taxi near the park. She appeared before a U.S. magistrate in Buffalo on a charge of illegal re-entry.

Cellphone encryption

FBI director warns new technology could derail probes

FBI Director James Comey warned in stark terms Thursday against the push by technology companies to encrypt smartphone data and operating systems, arguing that murder cases could be stalled, suspects could walk free and justice could be thwarted by a locked phone or an encrypted hard drive. He singled out the recent announcements by Apple and Google that their new operating systems are encrypted.

Privacy advocates and technology experts called the concerns exaggerated and little more than recycled arguments the government has raised against encryption since the early 1990s. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'We were lucky,' says Canadian survivor

Himalayan tragedy. Quebec woman tells harrowing tale of surviving avalanche in Nepal's mountains

A Canadian survivor of the Nepal avalanche that killed at least 27 people has described being buried waist-high in thick, heavy snow on a "nightmare" of a day.

Quebecer Sonia Leveque said she thought she was going to die and that she and her fellow trekkers are fortunate to be alive. "We fought for survival and we were lucky," she told RDI, Radio-Canada's all-news network.

She said nobody in her small group saw the avalanche coming. "It happened extremely quickly — within seconds, we were separated," Leveque said.

"Three people in our group were swept away (and) we tried to find them but there was about 20 metres of snow accumulated at the bottom of the avalanche."

The death toll in the tragedy was revised upward Thursday to 27, with four Canadians among the dead and others among the roughly 70 people missing.

Three Quebec women were reported missing, including Genevieve Adam. Her father feared the worst as he travelled to Nepal. His brother, Francois Adam, said Genevieve was asleep in her tent with other trekkers.

"What I know is that it happened at around four o'clock in the morning," he said. "She was sleeping, (and) bang! it hit and passed over them and they were carried down along with the avalanche." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Climate change

Climate experts say rising global temperatures have contributed to avalanches in the Himalayas.

Will Bay Street become a believer in Bitcoin?

CAVIRTEX. Entrepreneur wants people to buy into country's first Bitcoin currency exchange

JESSICA SMITH CROSS

CAVIRTEX founder Joseph David. JESSICA SMITH-CROSS/METRO

Calgarian Joseph David has come to Toronto seeking money. He's the founder of Canada's first and largest Bitcoin currency exchange, and he's hoping to convince Canada's traditional financial establishment to get into Bitcoin.

"I've been preparing all my life for this," said David in an interview at the Intercontinental Hotel.

David gave a presentation at the World Money Show on Thursday. He's hoping to get players in "mainstream finance" interested in Bitcoin so they'll be customers of his exchange, CAVIRTEX (pronounced "C–A Virtex"), which charges 0.5 to 1.5 per cent to exchange bitcoins for Canadian dollars, depending on the value of the trade.

"I'm looking forward to getting onstage in front of financial industry experts and mainstream finance, who haven't even heard of Bitcoin yet," he said.

He's also attempting to secure venture capital support for his company to expand and launch the first Bitcoin investment fund in Canada.

He may have a tough time: The volume of Bitcoin trading has gone down over the past six months, as has its price. Bitcoin is currently trading at about $430, significantly down from its peak of almost $1,200.

When David got into Bitcoin, it was worth about $1.

In 2010, a friend told David about the virtual currency and he shuttered his telecom company to go into Bitcoin full-time.

"I asked, 'Where do you buy it?' And the answer, back then, was at a Denny's in Calgary on Macleod Trail. It was like a dating service: You had to go online and find someone," he said. "You had to go with the laptop and the cash and shake hands.

"I thought, 'You've got to be kidding me.'"

So David saw the need for a Canadian currency Bitcoin exchange to make it easy for everyone to buy, and launched CAVIRTEX in 2011.

Last winter, in the months after the FBI brought unprecedented worldwide attention to Bitcoin by busting Silk Road — the illegal online market that used the currency — Bitcoin hit its all-time-high value.

But then in March, the world's largest Bitcoin exchange, Mt. Gox, imploded into bankruptcy through alleged hacking and mismanagement, taking customer's wealth and, according to David, many people's faith in Bitcoin, with it.

"The interest just died down and there was fear," he said.

Now he thinks that fear is easing and Bitcoin has recently seen a small rally.

Venture capitalists have increased their investment in all things Bitcoin, he said.

"So venture capitalists see it coming. They're putting money into the future of Bitcoin because they think it's the future of money."

According to David, the venture capitalists see Bitcoin's future as a binary, as in zero or one, all or nothing.

"They say … either it's going to succeed and go big, or it's going to go to zero," he said. "Right now, we're going for one: It's going to succeed."

2 Seth Rogen's mom. There has to be a punchline when a comedian's parent tries to figure out social media. Take Seth Rogen's mom Sandy, for example. Her series of LOL tweets included "i am trying to tweet a picture and i can't. and if you answer me i can't figure out how to see it. seth call me." Seth's tweet response/punchline: "My mom @RogenSandy is not adapting to her new role as a Twitter giant just yet."

3 Dallas Green & Pink? In seemingly the most unlikely of collaborations, Canada's indie-rocker Dallas Green (a.k.a. City and Colour) and Alecia Moore (a.k.a. pop star Pink) released a country-folksy album this week called Rose Ave. under the moniker You+Me. Recorded over eight days, it's actually terrific, and these friends could have one of the breakout indie albums of the year.

4 Sexiest tired person. 40-year-old Penelope Cruz was chosen by Esquire as this year's Sexiest Woman Alive in its new November issue. But as Penelope (mother of two young children) told the magazine, she feels more like a "mother who doesn't get enough sleep." In other words, Esquire should have called this the Sexiest Most Exhausted Mother Alive.

5 R.I.P. Ralph the Programme Guy. For decades, Raphael Platner — a.k.a. Ralph the Programme Guy — was a fixture in his tight athletic shorts and thick-framed glasses selling programmes at Toronto sporting and entertainment events. He died recently at age 67, and as sports personality Mark Hebscher noted in an eloquent blog post on Ralph, "He may have been Toronto's greatest witness to sports history."

6 Arresting humour. Standup comedian Adam Newman was performing at Upright Citizens Brigade theatre in New York when NYPD police officers doing an arrest there interrupted his set. Newman improvised and attempted to bring the cops into his standup act, to which one responded, "Shut the f— up." In other words, possibly the best heckler of all time during a comic act.

7 Beyoncé's bangs. Paparazzi pics showing Beyoncé sporting a new Bettie Page 'do left some people scratching their heads and others pulling out their hair on social media over the style. Really now, all this fuss over a new hairstyle is just a tad ridiculous. But this is the pop culture world we live in. George Clooney just needs to tweet a picture of himself in a wrinkled Armani suit and we can all move on.

A dirty, depraved look at war

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

metro AR Brad Pitt takes on another war movie. Scan this photo with your Metro News app to see some explosive, intense, behind-the-scenes action from the set of Fury. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Set in April 1945, Fury sees hard-bitten commander "Wardaddy" Collier (Brad Pitt) lead a U.S. 2nd armoured division tank nicknamed Fury through Germany in the final days of the Second World War. His crew, "Bible" Swan (Shia LaBeouf, once again acting opposite giant machines), Gordo (Michael Peña) and redneck Grady (Jon Bernthal), have fought together since the beginning of the war. When Norman Ellison (Logan Lerman), a new gunner recruit with no battle experience, signs on, he must fit in or endanger the entire crew. "You are no use to me if you can't kill krauts," says Wardaddy.

Fury. Beneath the mud and body parts is a primal film that refuses to glamorize the Second World War

Richard: Mark, Fury is a brutal war film with exciting and well-executed battle sequences, but its most vicious scene takes place over a meal, at a table set with a lace tablecloth. It happens midway in the film after the crew has captured a German town. Once bullets stop flying, two local women prepare a meal for Wardaddy and Norman. The long scene begins with tension as the ladies try to figure out if the Nazi hunters mean them harm, but when the core group crowds around the table it becomes something akin to a surreal family dinner where real humanity, or lack thereof, is laid bare. It could have stopped the movie dead, but instead is a welcome interlude that showcases the effects of battle on a tightly knit but disparate group of men.

Mark: Yes, Richard, it's an excruciating scene, and I mean that in the best way. What I liked about it was the way it disposed of the "greatest generation" mythology and showed American soldiers as borderline rapists and sadists. Not Pitt, of course, who is just and fair, but some of the soldiers who saved us from the Nazis were swine themselves. It is a depressing irony in a film that's too tough for irony. I admired the general toughness of the movie. War is not glamorized; it's shown to be a cesspool of degradation, a literal mud bath. I can't even imagine what the mud budget was for the picture.

RC: The mud budget and the cost of the fake body parts that litter the battlefield must have rivalled Pitt's salary. Those are the details, however, that give the movie so much of its grit. The dinner scene helps open the movie up and keep it from becoming Das Boot on land, but I was fascinated by the tank interiors. A sense of claustrophobia, tension and fear percolates inside the tank cab and literally bleeds off the screen. It helps that the performances are very strong, but it's the primal feeling of being trapped inside the small space that gives the movie much of its oomph.

MB: Yes, I couldn't get into the elevator after I saw the film. The performances are strong, as you say, and I was most impressed by Shia LaBoeuf, who we can now all forgive for all those Transformers movies. Michael Peña is great, but he's always great. A real surprise is Jon Bernthal, a relative newcomer, who nails his southern-fried redneck character as a man you equally hate and pity. And what did you think of Pitt, Richard?

RC: Pitt really pulls this off. At first I was concerned he was going to hand in a rehash of his Nazi-hunting character from Inglourious Basterds. That character was over-the-top, and so is this one in his own way. Much of his dialogue sounds like it was written by Quentin Tarantino, but the character is deeper, not so much in what he says, but in his quiet scenes when everything you need to know about him is written on his face.

MB: The sadness is even in his haircut, which has its own gravitational pull.

Why we page the spirit world

Ouija. Another film about the cardboard conduit to the other side is being released, which prompts the question: Why does a silly game freak us out so much?

Ouija opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

CHRIS ALEXANDER
scene@metronews.ca

The defining mystery of our species is what happens after our heart stops beating; after our warm shell turns cold and life ceases to be.

Indeed, questions surrounding death serve as the foundations of our life and the idea that life can exist after death is the root source of all our mythology.

But if people can exist posthumously, if souls exist and continue to be trapped in some kind of spectral plane, how would we reach them? More importantly — how could they reach us?

Enter the Ouija board.

The Ouija, that mysterious alphanumerical board game, has, since it first became commercially available in 1891, fascinated and terrified those who have dared to make contact with the dead, either on a lark or with serious intent.

The board itself was named after early investors in the product sat around with their fingers on the "planchette" (the pear-shaped wooded device meant to channel ghosts) and asked the spirits what they should call the new gimmick.

Reportedly, unseen forces then pushed them to collectively spell out O-U-I-J-A followed by a slide to the phrase "good luck." That was enough of a sign, and the Ouija board was officially christened.

Its powers now largely debunked, the Ouija board has long been a staple of parties, especially popular amongst giddy teens trying to out-spook each other amidst binges of junk food and late-night horror movie marathons, but there was a time when the Ouija board was thought to be a legitimate conduit to the ether.

Those mourning their deceased loved ones, finding no solace in prayer or religion, would seek out the board in an attempt to find comfort and closure. And real or not, the idea of the Ouija board is still potent enough that even the most sophisticated individual might break a sweat when clustered together with a group of people, hands employing centrifugal force to make the board "talk."

That's the idea behind director Stiles White's new thriller Ouija, opening next week and the latest in a long line of horror films that have mined the mysteries of the purportedly haunted, mass-marketed "talking board."

Films like:

13 Ghosts (1960)
Gimmick-master William Castle's goofy horror classic in which Ghost Viewers were exploited to see the spooks onscreen, boasts only one legitimately frightening scene, when the family hunkers down in their new house and drags out the Ouija. As the music swells, the tone in the room turns from jovial to jarring as the walls rattle and the board steers itself to swear violent death to all those in the home.

The Exorcist (1973)
Fans of this essential fright flick tend to cite the more visceral moments of self-abuse and pea-soup puking, but for our money, the eeriest moment occurs when young Regan (Linda Blair) tells her mom plainly that someone or something named "Captain Howdy" is speaking to her through her Ouija board.

Witchboard (1986)
The most famous of all Ouija board shockers, in which future O.J. Simpson squeeze Tawny Kitaen messes around with the game and opens up a spectral portal to Hell, getting possessed by a malevolent spirit in the process.

A major hit with gullible kids in the 1980s, the film spawned several lame sequels and spiked Ouija board sales worldwide.

What Lies Beneath (2000)
This undervalued suspense masterclass has a pivotal plot arc when a harried housewife (Michelle Pfeiffer), convinced her home is haunted, goes to her local discount store to buy a Ouija board and proceeds to use it ... in the bathroom, of all places.

Like Pfeiffer does in that film, you, too, can pick up a Ouija board for a few bucks at any local store that stocks board games. But the question remains: should you?

Dakota wants to pull the Shades on family viewing

Dakota Johnson

Maybe Dakota Johnson is rethinking her decision to star in the film adaptation of 50 Shades of Grey, as the young actress doesn't want her family to watch it, according to the National Enquirer. Sources say Johnson "can't bear the thought" of her parents, Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson, or her grandmother, Tippi Hedren, watching the film's steamier and kinkier elements. She is apparently OK with 18-year-old half-sister Stella Banderas watching, though. The film's getting a pretty wide release, so if she really wants to be this picky about who can and can't see it, she'll have her work cut out for her.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Robin Thicke comes to an unpretty posse

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Robin Thicke may have lost Paula Patton, but he's gained a notorious gang of new friends. The Blurred Lines singer has apparently been inducted as the newest member of Leonardo DiCaprio's infamous group of guy pals with a … rather unfortunate nickname.

Really, the group is a longstanding thing. There's even an infamous NY Mag piece about them from 1998. Members who've been by Leo's side for years include Lukas Haas, Kevin Connolly and David Blaine, and the most recent inductee before Thicke was reportedly Jonah Hill, so who wouldn't want to join? Anyway, according to Page Six, Thicke announced his inclusion in the … posse by throwing himself a divorce party — so classy — in L.A. recently. "There were a lot of models there. Leo and Robin were being super flirtatious and talking to tons of girls," a source says. "Robin, in particular, was dancing and talking to a pretty brunette throughout most of the night. At one point, he grabbed a girl's hand and was like, 'Let's dance.'" What a lucky lady.

It was no lickety split, but Seal and Heidi are so over it already

Seal and Heidi Klum

It took nearly three years of negotiating, but Heidi Klum and Seal are finally officially divorced, with the agreement finalized earlier this week, according to TMZ. The Project Runway host and the Kiss from a Rose singer were married seven years before splitting up in January 2012. The divorce must have not been that heated, as the two have been seen attending their kids' soccer games recently, looking perfectly friendly. Klum, for her part, has already moved on and is reportedly dating 27-year-old playboy Vito Schnabel. Wait, wait, wait. Playboy is still an actual, viable profession? For serious? I knew I picked the wrong major in college.

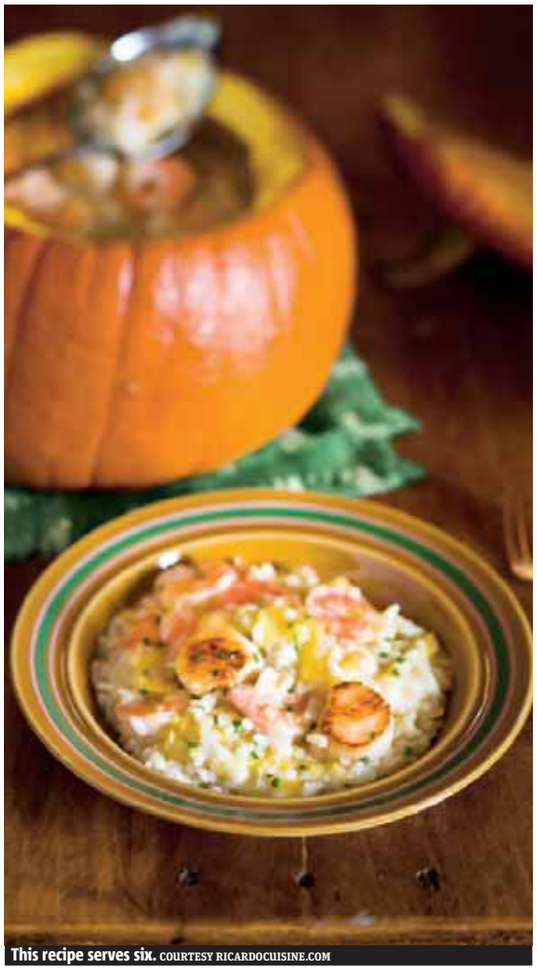
Carve out a new purpose for pumpkin



This recipe serves six. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Pumpkin and Seafood Risotto. You may be sick of pie, but this fall staple can also be a savoury flavour enhancer

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

Jack-o'-lanterns are fun, but my favourite uses for pumpkins involve a little seafood. It's time to see pumpkins in a new light.

1. With the rack in the lowest position, preheat the oven to 350 F (180 C).

2. With a knife, remove the top of the pumpkin. With a spoon, scrape out the seeds until the inside of the pumpkin is smooth. Lightly oil the pumpkin, inside and out. Season the inside with salt and pepper. Place on a baking sheet. Bake for about 1 hour and 30 minutes or until the flesh is tender. Keep warm.

3. Meanwhile, in a saucepan, heat the chicken broth and clam juice. Set aside.

4. In another saucepan, soften the shallots in the butter. Add the rice and coat with the butter. Add the broth, about 1 cup (250 ml) at a time, stirring frequently until the liquid has been completely absorbed before adding more broth. After about 20 minutes, the rice should be al dente. Remove from the heat and stir in the cheese. Adjust the seasoning. Pour into the pumpkin, stir and scrape some flesh into the risotto, to taste. Adjust the seasoning.

5. Meanwhile, in a large non-stick skillet, sear the scallops and shrimp, one after the other, in the oil. Season with salt and pepper. Stir seafood and chive in the risotto. Place the pumpkin in a serving dish in the centre of the table. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA AND ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE'S ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED THIS SEPTEMBER!

Ingredients

- 1 pumpkin, about 6 1/2 lb (3 kg)
- olive oil, for brushing
- 4 cups (1 litre) chicken broth
- 1 cup (250 ml) clam juice
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) shallots, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) butter
- 2 cups (500 ml) arborio rice
- 1 cup (250 ml) grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- Salt and pepper

Topping

- 3/4 lb (350 g) medium-sized scallops, patted dry
- 3/4 lb (350 g) medium-sized shrimp, shelled, deveined and patted dry
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) olive oil
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chopped fresh chives

With Thanksgiving done and dusted, the only pumpkin most of you may be interested in seeing is one grinning at you from your front porch on Halloween.

I'm betting the lack of post-holiday love for jack-o'-lantern meat as a meal ingredient is because we associate it only with pie.

Ricardo gets his gourd on in this week's recipe: a twist on seafood risotto that not only features pumpkin as a flavour enhancer, but as a serving receptacle as well.

With or without the vegetal element, seafood risotto is a white wine drinker's dish.

Something light, dry and slightly citrusy will go swimmingly with the aquatic highlights, temper the risotto's earthiness and lift the aromatics of the pumpkin flesh.

With its subtle effervescence, a dry Italian Prosecco would be a fine choice, as would a crisp pinot grigio.

The 2013 Bolla Pinot Grigio ($11.95 - $14.50) is refreshingly old-school in its gentle expression of the grape.

Soft, fragrant and with nice acidity, it's a perfect partner for this fall fare.

Unexpected combo of flavours

This Orange and Pumpkin Tart recipe serves eight. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Ingredients

Short crust

- 1 1/4 cups (310 ml) all-purpose flour
- A pinch of salt
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) unsalted butter, softened
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) sugar
- 2 egg yolks

Pumpkin Filling

- 3/4 cup (180 ml) 35% cream
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) sugar
- Grated zest of 1 orange
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) pumpkin purée
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) orange juice
- 1 egg
- 2 egg yolks

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 400 F (200 C).

2. In a bowl, combine the flour and salt. Set aside.

3. In another bowl, cream butter and sugar with an electric mixer. Add egg yolks, one at a time, and beat until smooth, 30 seconds. With a wooden spoon, stir in the dry ingredients. The dough will be grainy.

4. With fingertips, press dough into a 9-inch (23 cm) pie plate with removable bottom. Bake 12 minutes. Allow to cool.

5. Reduce the oven temperature to 325 F (170 C).

6. Filling: In a saucepan, bring cream to a boil with the sugar and zest. Remove from the heat and let steep for 5 minutes.

7. In a bowl, combine pumpkin purée, orange juice and eggs with a whisk. Gradually whisk in the warm cream. Strain the mixture through a sieve.

8. Pour into crust. Bake for 30 or until custard becomes firm in the centre. Let cool. Refrigerate for about 4 hours. Serve cold. RICARDO

Celebrating 70 years working for quality health care for all

Back in 1944, the workers at Vancouver General Hospital were represented by a men's union and a women's union. They decided together was better and the 390 hospital workers joined to form BC's Hospital Employees' Union.

Seven decades later, 46,000 women and men are represented by the largest health care union in the province. Through our daily work and with our strength in numbers, we continue to advocate for better public health care — so all British Columbians benefit.

Inside the mind of an NHL scorer

Lighting the red lamp. Canucks forward Radim Vrbata talks shooting, scoring and equipment

CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

When it comes to hockey equipment, Radim Vrbata can be a picky guy.

Above all else, he has to be comfortable with his stick and skates. When those are feeling good, everything else doesn't matter as much. It's easy to see why, considering the two elements of his game that make him the most dangerous are his skating and his shot.

"If I feel good with skates and sticks, everything else is fine," said Vrbata, who signed a two-year, $10-million contract with the Vancouver Canucks this summer.

"If you have something that's not right, you're thinking about it and that makes a difference.

"We might have a chance and you might have to make a decision in that split second, and if you're thinking about something else — your skate or stick isn't feeling right — that chance is gone."

The Canucks, off to a 2-0 start to the season, face the Edmonton Oilers on the road Friday. They're back home to host the Tampa Bay Lightning on Saturday at Rogers Arena.

Through two regular-season games, Vrbata has scored twice and looked very comfortable on a line with the Sedin twins.

Canucks right-winger Radim Vrbata celebrates scoring a goal against the Oilers at Rogers Arena last Saturday.
JONATHAN HAYWARD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Sedins are creative, with deft passing abilities. Vrbata is a former 35-goal scorer and a shooter.

He can let go with the big, booming slap shot while cutting down the wing, or he can deploy a subtle but quick-release wrist shot, when the puck is on and off the blade of his stick in an instant.

"When you're younger, I don't think you have a good enough shot because if you're a good player you have breakaways and you can deke guys and you can deke goalies. You don't need to use that shot," said the 33-year-old Vrbata.

"But once you get older, the competition gets harder. You need to find ways to score goals … and it comes with a shot."

Koffie could soon return for Caps

Gershon Koffie will travel with the Vancouver Whitecaps down to San Jose, head coach Carl Robinson said Thursday.

Whether the Ghanaian midfielder plays against the Earthquakes remains to be seen.

The 23-year-old Koffie has been out of the lineup for more than two months now due to a foot injury, but has been training with the club following a return to full health. This means Robinson may make a change to the lineup, as the Whitecaps look to retain the fifth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

The Whitecaps have a one-point lead on the Portland Timbers for fifth place. Both clubs have two games remaining on their respective schedules.

The Whitecaps can clinch a playoff spot with a victory Saturday in San Jose, combined with a Portland loss to Real Salt Lake on Friday.

Koffie had been playing exceptional soccer for the Whitecaps prior to his injury, paired in the midfield with Matias Laba.

"We have missed him because of the type of player he is," Robinson said of Koffie.

With Koffie out, Canadian Russell Teibert had been used in that defensive midfield position and done a solid job.

"We haven't had the options when Gershon has been missing," said Robinson. "The physicality he brings to the table, the understanding of the game is huge and that's why we've missed him."

VANCOUVER GIANTS

Vancouver Giants

Ramsay more than welcome

The Vancouver Giants have high hopes for Gage Ramsay.

Most of that is because the young centre apparently wants the puck on his stick, and quite a bit too, according to general manager Scott Bonner, which fits just fine with this team's new style.

The Giants announced earlier this week that the club's third-round pick in the 2013 Bantam Draft had been added to the active roster.

The 16-year-old Ramsay signed a WHL player agreement with the Giants at the end of August.

Ramsay is scheduled to fly into Vancouver from his hometown of Saskatoon on Friday, and could make his Giants debut Saturday against the Prince George Cougars.

The Giants host the Kamloops Blazers on Friday.

Listed at just five feet eight inches and 160 pounds, Ramsay impressed the Giants brass with his speed and skill during rookie and training camps, before the club granted his wish to return home to Saskatchewan at the beginning of this season.

"He reached out to us two days ago and asked, 'Is there still an opportunity to come back?' We opened the doors in a hurry," Bonner said Thursday.

"To me, he's one of our prominent young guys." CAM TUCKER/METRO

Habs ditch Bruins in home opener

Brendan Gallagher and P.A. Parenteau each had two goals as the Montreal Canadiens chased goalie Tuukka Rask out of the game to win their NHL home opener 6-4 over the Boston Bruins on Thursday night.

Max Pacioretty had a goal and two helpers, while Jiri Sekac got his first NHL goal for Montreal (4-1-0).

Zdeno Chara, Carl Soderberg, Loui Eriksson and Simon Gagne, with his first as a Bruin, replied for Boston (2-4-0). Rask allowed five goals on 23 shots before leaving 7:17 into the third in favour of Niklas Svedberg. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NLCS. Ishikawa pulls off dream hit, sets San Francisco's date with Royals in Fall Classic

Travis Ishikawa hit a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, sending the San Francisco Giants to the World Series with a 6-3 win over the St. Louis Cardinals on Thursday night.

These every-other-year Giants clinched the NL Championship Series in Game 5 and now will face the Royals in an all wild-card Fall Classic that begins Tuesday night in Kansas City.

Pablo Sandoval singled to start the ninth against Michael Wacha, making his first appearance of the post-season for the Cardinals. After an out, Brandon Belt walked to bring up Ishikawa, who drove a 2-0 pitch into the elevated seats in right field.

Ishikawa hit the first game-ending homer in NLCS history. And it was the first time a homer sent the Giants into the World Series since perhaps the most famous drive ever in baseball: Bobby Thomson's "Shot Heard 'Round the World" in a 1951 playoff.

Ishikawa knew right away on his first career post-season homer, raising his right arm into the air as he watched his ball sail into the seats. He was immediately mobbed at home plate after he rounded the bases as fireworks shot off from the centre field scoreboard. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Biogenesis scandal

Anthony Bosch pleads guilty to distributing PEDs

The former owner of a South Florida anti-aging clinic pleaded guilty Thursday to charges of illegally providing performance-enhancing drugs to athletes including high-profile Major League Baseball players, most notably New York Yankees star Alex Rodriguez.

Anthony Bosch, former owner of the Biogenesis of America clinic in Coral Gables, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute testosterone before U.S. District Judge Darrin P. Gayles. Bosch, who was not a medical doctor yet called himself "Dr. T," faces a maximum 10-year prison sentence but is likely to get far less because of cooperation with prosecutors and with MLB's investigation into player drug use.

Six other people are charged in the case, and Bosch has agreed to testify against them if they go to trial. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
The mood you start the day with will remain with you until the start of next week, so find something to cheer you up and get you smiling.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
It's nice to know your efforts are appreciated and Saturn in your opposite sign is about to bring you recognition. It will give your confidence a boost.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Don't push yourself too hard physically or worry that you are not giving enough mentally or emotionally. With your ruler Mercury moving retrograde this is the ideal time to slow down.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may not be looking forward to a social event but the planets indicate if you make the effort to enjoy yourself you will be surprised how much fun you have. Go ahead, lighten up.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Make an effort to get on top of your workload before the weekend begins. There is so much going on socially that it would be a shame to miss out.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The positive results of the decisions you made a few weeks ago will be apparent over the next few days. No effort is ever wasted, so stop feeling sorry for yourself.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Saturn in the main financial area of your chart means you need to be on your guard today whenever you hear the phrase "business opportunity" or something similar.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Today's cosmic set-up warns you cannot afford to be half involved. Friends, family and work colleagues expect total commitment and you owe it to them to give 100 per cent.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you push yourself beyond your natural limits today you may regret it come the start of next week. If you need to free up more time try wasting less of it on trivial pursuits.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
A partnership or relationship issue can easily be resolved today, if you are prepared to sit down and listen to the other person's grievances.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Wherever you happen to be and whatever you happen to be doing at this precise moment of time is exactly right for you, so lighten up and make it work.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The planets warn you will have to make sacrifices in your social life today and over the weekend if you are to make progress in more serious areas.
